Paris, Washington DC, 24.07.2022, 14:29 Time

USPA NEWS - A report on the General Sates of Justice was delivered by the Minister of Justice Eric Dupond Moretti to the President of the French Republic Emmanuel Macron on July 8, 2022, at the Elysee, by one of the most famous and legendary French magistrates, Jean Marc Sauve. The 1,400 pages report, entitled "Giving justice to citizens" reveals a sad observation of the current state of the judicial institution in France, which has been degraded for decades, and shows the great suffering of the people of justice and the loss of confidence of litigants, fatigue of excessively long delays in their proceedings, both criminal and civil. On February 9, 2022, unions of justice professionals (magistrates, clerks, court staff) had filed a complaint against the French State before the European Commission for "breach of European legislation in terms of labor legislation applicable to magistrates" . This complaint also failed and followed the call of the 3000, following the general demonstration of the magistrates of December 15, 2021. The unions had then filed their complaint with the European Commission, summoning it to respond, within 70 days, considering that the request is well-founded.

A report on the General Sates of Justice was delivered by the Minister of Justice Eric Dupond Moretti to the President of the French Republic Emmanuel Macron on July 8, 2022, at the Elysee, by one of the most famous and legendary French magistrates, Jean Marc Sauve. The 1,400 pages report, entitled "Giving justice to citizens" reveals a sad observation of the current state of the judicial institution in France, which has been degraded for decades, and shows the great suffering of the people of justice and the loss of confidence of litigants, fatigue of excessively long delays in their proceedings, both criminal and civil. On February 9, 2022, unions of justice professionals (magistrates, clerks, court staff) had filed a complaint against the French State before the European Commission for "breach of European legislation in terms of labor legislation applicable to magistrates" . This complaint also failed and followed the call of the 3000, following the general demonstration of the magistrates of December 15, 2021. The unions had then filed their complaint with the European Commission, summoning it to respond, within 70 days, considering that the request is well-founded and may demand explanations from the French State, possibly put it on notice to explain itself, or even bring an action for failure to fulfill obligations before the Court of Justice of the European Union. Among their demands, the request is explicit: the simple correct application of the working time rules requiring the hiring of 1350 additional magistrates, apart from the justice personnel to deliver quality justice within a reasonable time.

"We have to be clear, we have taken too long to modernize our information systems, our digitization. And the legitimate impatience of professionals is there. In accordance with our philosophy in all areas of public action, which consists of both investing and transforming, all these reforms have been accompanied by unprecedented investments. Where justice had been a budgetary adjustment variable for decades, it has become a priority: +30% in 5 years. declared the President of the Republic Emmanuel Macron, very lucid, on October 18 at the Estates General of Justice in Poitiers.

This report is a preamble to an action plan and a programming law for justice, which should be applied at the start of the school year, i.e. in the fall of 2022. This report thus called for a systemic reform in order to "clarify the role of justice in society, the place of the judicial authority in the city and the mission of the judge" in a context of general mistrust of institutions.

For Jean-Marc Sauvé, the Church has not been "able to see or hear". He considers it "essential and inevitable" that it recognize its systemic responsibility.

This SAUVE report had been hailed by the entire legal profession and by public opinion via the media, because Jean-Marc Sauvé called on the Catholic Church to accept responsibility for these acts, not only individually but systemically, stressing that "She had not been able", even "not wanted", to take up the subject. He had also reiterated the recommendation of the commission to lift the secrecy of the confession in the event of sexual abuse of a minor and a vulnerable person, if thus opposing the position of the Church for which the secrecy of confession should be inviolable, which was unprecedented in history, as regards the transparency of the partials and certain pressures of the Catholic Church.

And the evocation of these prison places also allows me here to have the opportunity to thank the staff of the prison administration. promised President Macron.

"We have also started the major digitization project, it has also been mentioned several times just now. This will allow them to refocus on their core business; internal security forces, magistrates, lawyers, administrative staff. From 2022, the digital criminal procedure will begin to be deployed throughout the territory. » declared President Macron.

EXCESSIVELY LONG TRIALS DELAYS HAVE BROKEN LITIGANT CONFIDENCE IN FRENCH JUSTICE

Excessive trial times, insufficient or obsolete IT tools and infrastructure, late execution of court decisions, decline in collegiality, unworthy detention conditions... The crisis experienced by French justice is present both on the side of professionals and litigants. The discouragement of some and the misunderstanding of others tend to become worrying for the guarantee of rights:

- average trial times have been lengthened over the past decades, reaching 13.9 months for the first instance in 2019, 15.8 months on appeal and up to 16 months at labor courts;
- the lack of quality of justice delivered in criminal matters has led to an increase in short prison sentences;
- the deterioration and overcrowding of prisons and remand prisons hinder reintegration and promote recidivism.

Jean-Marc Sauve reminded me of the 1983 law on community service. President Macron had thus allowed an increase in the number of prison places, including the shortage, preventing magistrates from enforcing prison sentences.

REPORT DEMANDS SYSTEMIC JUSTICE REFORM

The report affirms the need for systemic reform including:

- clarification of the role of justice in society. The missions attributed to the judge must be better defined around the most fundamental of them (application and interpretation of the rule of law, protection of persons);
- the strengthening of the first instance to once again become "the place where justice is primarily rendered";
- the drastic increase in staff: 1,500 magistrates should be recruited over the next five years;
- the opening of justice to civil society.

In addition, the report considers "premature" the abolition of investigating judges. Source: Ministry for Justice
